Scattle is one of the liveliset cities we visited while on the Pacific coast. It is located, has all the coast cities, on the booffs, which rise from Puget sound to a hight of from 100 to 500 feet. The city has one of the best and most to a light of from two to see the first and most berfect street railway systems of any city in the country. Lable cars are used on the streets which run up the biuffe and electric cars on those which run parallel with the bills.

Seattle is already a great manufacturing center and many new enterprises are now under consideration. Extensive iron and coal mines are being opened in the mountains, a short distance away, which will add a new impetits to its natural growth.

Wueat raising is becoming one of Washington's great industries. Apples, peaches, pears, plums and all varieties of small fruits are raised in ahundance. Scattle's population in 1880 was 3,521, in 1880, 9,683, in 1890, 45,933, and at the time of our visit they claimed between 50,000 and 55,000. It is now claimed, as to number of inhabitants, to be the third city (fronting sait water) from Cape Horn to the Bering sea, being exceeded only by Valparaiso and San

Another such body of fresh water lying within a few mules of a noble ocean sound, with which it may be joined, capable of being converted into an anchorage ground for the fleets of the world, does not exist elsewhere. It seems to have been provided by nature as a compliment to the nation's great harbor system, which the proposed canal will make perfect in every feature. fresh water lake lies midway of the canal route, and that ships will pass through it in their progress from ocean to ocean and avail themselves of its waters from freeing their bottoms from marine accretions. Fuget sound posresses cheap fuel for coaling vessels, and it is claimed that a canal to lake Washington will add greatly to its presentadyantages.

It is also claimed that the most ample and perfect facilities are of parnount importance to the great transamount importance to the great trans-continental railways which already converge at that city. If these rail-ways are important and necessary from a military point of view, if they tend to bind together and unify the distant sections of the republic, and hence possess national importance beyond their value as transportation lines, then certainly they should have com-plete terminals to enable them to more efficiently and in the work of developefficiently aid in the work of develop-ing and building up the material re-sources of the country. In this con-nection the fact should not be lost sight of that our neighbor, the Dominlou of Canada, spares no expense nor does it lose an opportunity to make perfect her transcontinental facilities; that she is going steadily forward to contest with us most strendously for the lake and ocean carrying trade.

With a ship canal joining the waters of the Puget with lake Washington, would make Seattle pre-emment in shipping facilities amongst the ports of the world.

Another Canal Plea By this improvement Lake Washington would add over fifty miles to the dock front of Seattle, thus increasing her harbor capacity over ten fold.

Another peculiar and most expensive Another peculiar and most expensive outlay, which came under our direct notice, is the maintenance of wharves and docks in the sait water of the Sound. The outlay and repairs of these are very great, by reason of the ravages of the teredo, which often destroys piling in a single year after they have destroys that the wharf stores and sometimes with loss of life.
